

Skip to main contentr/GooglePixel ×

Search in r/GooglePixel

Create

r/GooglePixel • 7d ago
PercentageInner1356

...

Advice on Pixel 8 speaker mesh repair refusal

I created a post a while back about my endeavours to get my Pixel 8 screen repaired:

<https://www.reddit.com/r/GooglePixel/s/RxHgT5atQK>

After two laborious chats with Google support they consulted the internal team via email. After a four day wait, my case is now stalled again because the repair team indicated they cannot repair my phone for free because of "broken speaker mesh".

I'm sure some of you have seen this on this subreddit before. The cosmetic damage to the mesh (if there is any) is used as a way to refuse a costly screen repair unless a hefty sum is paid. This is not only forbidden under EU consumer laws (repairs can only be refused if impossible or disproportionately costly), it is also a downright ridiculous way to treat loyal customers.

Any advice on how to proceed is greatly appreciated.

3

3

Share

DriverDashcamApp • Promoted

...

We pay drivers for dash cam footage to help make roads safer. Interested?

Sign Updrivertechnologies.com

Join the conversation

Sort by: Best ▾

Search Comments

horatiobanz • 7d ago

Top 1% Commenter

They're trying to push you into trading in the Pixel towards a new Pixel, giving them even more money. They are in a win-win-win situation for themselves. You could ask for your device back, repair the mesh yourself and then send in the phone for screen repair, but you risk breaking everything.

PercentageInner1356 OP • 7d ago

I think that an opened up phone voids any chance at a screen repair. Even with the additional cost it is probably cheaper to let them fix it than to do it myself or at a repair shop. However, this is not about

Create

PercentagelInner1356 OP • 7d ago

Hey u/pixelcommunity please check this!

Reddit Rules Privacy Policy User Agreement Accessibility Reddit, Inc. © 2026. All rights reserved.