

Skip to main contentr/GooglePixel ×

Search in r/GooglePixel

Create

r/GooglePixel • 2mo ago

ewaxbraun

...

Bought a brand-new Pixel 10 Pro at a Google pop-up — it had a factory defect and the store repaired it instead of replacing it. Anyone experienced this? Should I contact Google?

Hi everyone,

I'm really frustrated and not sure what to do next, so I thought I'd ask here.

A few weeks ago I bought a brand-new Google Pixel 10 Pro at the official Google pop-up in Warsaw (located inside Google's office near Rondo Daszyńskiego). It was sold through Media Expert store, but the pop-up was branded Google, the staff was Google, and the whole experience was supposed to feel like buying directly from Google.

When I got home and unboxed the phone, I immediately noticed a defect on the screen — clearly a factory flaw (pic: <https://imgur.com/a/rAkSJnF>). The phone had never been used.

I went back to the store the next day expecting a simple exchange for a new device (because it was literally defective out of the box). Instead, Media Expert sent the phone to a service center and... "repaired" it.

Now I'm being told to pick up a repaired phone — meaning that from day one I won't have a new device, but a fixed one. It's honestly really disappointing, because I deliberately chose a brand-new flagship Pixel, and I definitely didn't expect to end up with a refurbished-like unit straight after purchase.

Has anyone gone through something similar?

Do you think it makes sense to contact Google directly and explain the situation?

I'm a long-time Pixel user and this really isn't the experience I expected from buying at an official Google-branded pop-up.

Any advice would be appreciated.

3

35

Share

Join the conversationSort by: Best ▾Search CommentsTheLightStalker • 2mo ago

The only thing you should have gone back for is a refund.

rggzen • 2mo ago

I feel like there was some missed moments where you could have clarified you did not want a repair but a return. The moment they had to "send" it for repair should have been the moment you speak up at the

Skip to main content+ Creatematteventu • 2mo agoPixel C, 1 XL, 3, 6, 8 Pro, 9 Pro | Pixel Buds Pro Top 1% Commenter

They would have just said "I'm sorry, we cannot replace it, we need to send it for repair. It's our policy".

ShakeAndBakeThatCake • 2mo ago

You overestimate the average person's intelligence to have the foresight and understand this. Most people like being told what to do but then are pissed off after the fact lol.

mxinex • 2mo ago

Eh, this is totally fine according to EU warranty law. The seller has the right to offer a repair first instead of a replacement or total refund. That repair is again covered under warranty, so you shouldn't worry too much about it.

https://europa.eu/youreurope/business/dealing-with-customers/consumer-contracts-guarantees/consumer-guarantees/index_en.htm

AppropriateTie5127 • 2mo agoPixel 9 Pro Top 1% Commenter

To clarify, do you mean they repaired your phone or gave you a replacement "repaired" phone?

ewaxbraun OP • 2mo ago

they repaired my phone

OhShitBye • 2mo ago

Not uncommon for Google to fix your phone under warranty, but would be a good idea to find out from Google if this pop-up's work is officially licensed under them and therefore valid for warranty.

For instance my country Google and many other android makers don't do swaps, at most they may swap within the first week of purchase. Warranty claims are usually done via repairs at authorized Google repair centers.

404UsernameN0tFound • 2mo ago

You allowed them to send it away under warranty and it's too late to do anything about it now. You should have gone to the store and told them you were returning it as you were within the return period.

Skip to main content

Create

TopNotchGamerr • 2mo ago

Kind of on you ngl.

rojohi • 2mo ago

Pixel 7 Pro

That's how warranties work. If the rest of the phone is fine, there is nothing wrong with replacing a screen.

Far_Specific4836 🍰 • 2mo ago

🏆 Top 1% Commenter

Once you open the phone, there's absolutely no guarantees on the waterproofing or if the components are assembled correctly.

That absolutely sucks for a brand new device.

rojohi • 2mo ago

Pixel 7 Pro

That's what the warranty is for, and motivation for the company to ensure the process/parts for screen replacement doesn't impact those things.

If the head unit in my car malfunctioned, they are going to install a new head unit instead of giving me a whole other car.

Few_Elderberry_3495 • 2mo ago

And that is why there are things like lemon law for the car.

rojohi • 2mo ago

Pixel 7 Pro

That's protection for consumers after repeated warranty issues, not at the first sign of a failed component.

You people are hilarious

[deleted] • 2mo agoberfles • 2mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

You said it yourself... "they're going to install a new head unit..." This would be like them taking the head unit out and replacing internal components, keeping your car while that work is performed, and putting it back in. To have a brand new, out of box phone sent for repairs is bullshit. I would have never let them do that.

Skip to main content

Create

you clearly haven't met a Hyundai owner getting their engine replaced, or someone having to RMA a motherboard.

r4yf1nkle • 2mo ago

What if there's a scratch on the back?

fly-guy • 2mo ago

Quite Black

Than they have to repair that too.

Poland, being in the EU, has warranty laws which gives the seller the right to repair instead of replace. And they obviously did repair it.

It doesn't impact the warranty her now/still has.

[deleted] • 2mo agoPepperCat1019 • 2mo ago

Yeah, the warranty doesn't work the way it should. I had a similar experience with BlackBerry. Instead of replacing the phone with new, they gave me a refurbished one.

ewaxbraun OP • 2mo ago

I see :(

horatiobanz • 2mo ago

Top 1% Commenter

I don't understand the question. You bought a Pixel and are getting the Pixel experience. What are you complaining about exactly?

[deleted] • 2mo agoCitan_KL • 2mo ago

regardless if this is common practice, or within a seller's rights, or in the warranty's fine print, a manufacturer like google should mandate across the board that customers bringing obvious factory hardware defects to their attention within the first day, 2 days, 1 week (whichever), receive a brand new replacement, on the spot or mailed to them, no questions asked.

because if this never happened, or if OP was able to make an exchange no sweat, then google (and possibly that store) could have a customer for life - one who'd recommend their products to friends and a few years ago my dad bought a new car and only a day later noticed the windshield had a 2 inch stress crack in the upper passenger side corner. we learned this was a common factory defect for that particular model, and in all likelihood the crack was there before he drove it off the lot. he made a stink, but obviously all they could do was replace the windshield. had he spotted it before leaving, they likely would have repaired it and knocked the price down some, because nobody wants a brand new car, phone, etc. that gets worked on immediately.. it's no longer new, nor valued as such (and just plain sucks knowing).

Skip to main content+ Create

maybe my point is we should inspect the phones before leaving the store? i say this as someone who didnt open my Pixel 10 Pro until i got home (and a full day later). probably because i used to hate it years back when store employees opened it in front of you so they could 'activate' it (as if putting in the sim was such a complex task). i want that satisfaction.. not to watch you do it! but i digress..

12345-password • 2mo ago

Pixel 10 Pro XL

This has always happened to me with new pixels but even worse they send me a refurb. Every pixel after the 5 I've had to get replaced when it was basically new.

ewaxbraun OP • 2mo ago

Wtf!!

[deleted] • 2mo agoewaxbraun OP • 2mo ago

Hey everyone, Just wanted to share a quick update.

After following up with Google support, they confirmed that since the RMA was processed within the return window, I'm set to receive a brand new replacement device (not a refurbished one). For a long timethey claimed that it was unclear whether the device would be new or refurbished, but eventually, they officially confirmed that it would be new. I have it in writing, so I assume they're not lying.

I received an email with a link to place the replacement order. Once I complete that and the replacement is processed on their end, I should be able to confirm that the unit is indeed brand new. That's what support assured me.

domhubdom • 2mo ago

Było złożyć reklamację z tytułu rękojmi a nie bawić się w gwarancję

ewaxbraun OP • 2mo ago

Było:)

Create

Reddit Rules Privacy Policy User Agreement Accessibility Reddit, Inc. © 2026. All rights reserved.