First day with my Google pixel

I finally sltraded in my iPhone like I have been saying I would for so long to switch over to Android. I came to the conclusion that the Pixel 10 would be the best phone for me to have an easy transition to. I'm like 12 hours in with the phone and I am loving every second of it.

I'll report back when the honey moon phase wears off. But so far, miles better than my iPhone 15 pro max.

Planning on doing this switch too! Currently using the pixel as my work phone to get used to it and so far so good. The only hurdle I'm coming across is iMessage, a good cross platform notes app (currently using UpNote), and a good fitness tracking app until macrofactor releases theirs (using Lifitin' on iOS).

It's important for me to have cross platform apps since I still use an iPad pro as my main computer. I also have a Mac but use it sparingly

Activate RCS. It will give you some iMessage features but won't remove the green bubble 🤖

SwiftMushroom • 3mo ago

I personally don't care since RCS is basically the same... it's everyone else who has the issue 🤖

You can use the share button and click "add to home screen" on your ipad to "install" the google messages PWA app, then it launches/operates like a normal app. This should give you push notifications on the ipad as well for the notifications.

Oh really??? Thank you!!!

Mike_in_Cincy • 3mo ago

Yes. This is what I do on my iPad pro. Works well.

ShakeAndBakeThatCake • 3mo ago

Why not use Google keep? Works on every platform including web.

SwiftMushroom • 3mo ago

Formatting and organization is too limited. It's missing basics like bullet points and no formatting options on iPadOS

Right-Wrongdoer-8595 • 3mo ago

Pixel 8 Pro

Why not use docs for documents that need more formatting then?

SwiftMushroom • 3mo ago

Honestly? No idea lmao. Force of habit maybe and I like having all my notes in one app. May try today to move everything to docs and see how it is

Sweet. I will say, Google adding AirDrop support has been awesome

CYSOCOE OP • 3mo ago

Maybe use onenote, that's is what I switched to

BMox81 • 3mo ago

WhatsApp?

defconGO • 3mo ago

I'm in US and have been able to move my core family chats to Whatsapp (4 of 6 have iPhones). It's only the last few months that your been able to have native WhatsApp apps on iPad and Mac. I think that's helping get all-Apple people . For things like sharing videos and replying to messages, WhatsApp gives closer-to iMessage than RCS does.

I wish! I live in the US

Formatting options and organization are way too limited

PersimmonBroad3792 • 3mo ago

Congrats and hope you enjoy it. Did you get the regular 10 or 10 Pro?

for my iPhone. I basically didn't have to pay anything to upgrade.

PersimmonBroad3792 • 3mo ago

Cool. I look forward to hearing back in a few weeks on your experience.

I'll def try to remember to update her. Biggest hurdle was moving my esim over which was a pain because UK carriers are ass. And then every iMessage groupchats with my friends from back home in America all broke. Other than that I have not missed a single feature and feel like I am unplugged from the apple matrix

My wife and I ordered Pixel 10 Pro xls... should be here in a few days. My family of 4 all had iPhones, but my wife and I regretted switching to the iPhones 4 years or so ago. We had been Android users and just liked Android better. We got my kids each the Pixel 10s last week bc they were on older iPhones (11s) and TMobile had the Pixel on Us deal so we went ahead and upgraded the kids. I've been playing around with my son's new Pixel, and decided to go ahead and order the new ones for my wife and I so we can switch back to Android. We haven't been lifelong iPhone users (and preferred Android already) so I don't think we'll have any regret with the switch. I'll be going from an iPhone 14 Pro to the Pixel 10 Pro xl. I've already had friends tell me I'll be ruining the text chains lol. That seems more like an issue for them than me.

RealisticReference19 • 2mo ago

Turn RCS on and they won't even notice. The only thing they will see are the green bubbles lol rhyses_ • 3mo ago

Same boat. I bought my 10 pro XL over the weekend. It is absolutely astounding how different Android feels now, compared to when I last touched it. My last Android device was an S20 and I hated the thing.

It's like an entirely different ballgame now. Things feel so much more cohesive. I'm like still trying to comprehend everything.

I also bought a Pixel watch and it reminds me a ton of the old Moto 360 that I've always wanted as a kid.

I did same I was a lifey with apple I was so annoyed about how many times they tried to say their new and improved phone every year but it was the same shit different toilet. I finally decided to make the switch this year to Google pixel pro 10. So far I have no complaints. I actually like it better than the Apple. The only thing I have that's an issue is all my photos are not showing up on the phone but they show up on the computer on my Google photos. Tried everything and still can't figure it out. Also, I do find that the battery dies fairly quickly, but I also think that's because I have all this shit turned on in the background. Lol but it has wayyyyyy more features then apple, I can't believe how far behind apple is Sheesh

Got rid of my s25+ yesterday and have the 10 pro. Like it a lot so far

MonkeyNuts449 • 3mo ago

Really? Im curious as to why, im planning on going the opposite direction lol.

MilesAwayFromHere • 3mo ago

Best Buy had a good trade in for the phone $400, the phone was on sale for $849 for the 256 gig version. Plus I traded my Galaxy watch ultra in a good while ago and more gift card balance to
