

Skip to main content r/GooglePixel × Search in r/GooglePixel

Create

r/GooglePixel • 4mo ago
dejoflavo

...

Google and 3 Weeks of Hell

It's been 3 weeks since my Google Pixel 9 Pro Fold started having multiple problems. It's been 3 weeks since I've been going back and forth with Google over this phone. I bought the phone brand new about 3 months ago and it has been great until these last 3 weeks. These are my problems.

1. The SIM reader stopped reading my SIM suddenly
2. The Front screen started glitching and sometimes won't come on
3. The phone overheats every time I use it
4. The phone doesn't receive charge when unfolded
5. The camera app causes the phone to hang/crash
6. If restarted, the phone may not come on until after 12 hours of repeated attempts at turning it on
7. The phone just goes off on its own.

At first, Google had me send my phone to a google affiliated repair center who stated that the only problem with the phone was a small scratch and so the warranty had been removed. To fix the phone, I was given a quote for EXACTLY THE SAME AMOUNT I AM PAYING FOR THE PHONE!!!

I requested to have my phone returned and reached out to Google support again. This time, I was asked to take pictures of the phone and send it to the Google support again. The agent looked at the phone and stated that there were scratches to the phone's body, camera and inner screen. What he saw were left over stickies from the phone living in a Spigen body armor.

I spoke to another agent who just cut the phone on me and did not call back. After speaking to 5 different Google support agents, one agent finally agreed to have me send the phone to Google's very own technicians in Warsaw Poland. Within a day, I received a report that there was a dent on the inner screen and that the warranty had been removed and to fix it, I HAD TO PAY A THIRD OF WHAT I AM PAYING FOR THE PHONE!!! No report was given with regards the 7 problems the phone had.

It's been 3 weeks since this problem started, 3 weeks without a phone, 3 weeks of putting my sim in my wife's phone just to check my notifications. 3 weeks of going around in circles with Google support.

Still I haven't gotten any report about the 7 problems with the phone. Before this phone, I've been with Samsung for the past 17 years and I had no problems with their service whatsoever. Honestly I'm starting to regret leaving Samsung.

At the moment, I still do not have a phone, I'm still going back and forth with Google agents and so far, only one agent has brought up the option of a replacement and for that to occur, they have to check the warranty.

Please if you have experienced this problem or anything similar, what happens next? Will Google replace the phone? And if the answer is Yes (I hope), how long will it take.

My productivity has received a massive dent as a result of all this. I have had countless sleepless nights because of this.

Skip to main contentCreate↑ 6 ↓

12

ShareJoin the conversationSort by: Best ▾Search Commentsbrysoncreighton • 4mo ago

As a foldable user since 2020, the only option is to purchase whatever extended coverage is offered. I'd recommend it with any phone in fact. Too many things can happen with a phone, where you believe something is happening randomly, but some type of damage, small or not, has happened that gives the manufacture reason to say this is a user cased issue.

Not saying it is right, but it's up to the manufacture to determine weather a device should be fixed on their dime or yours. That extra $200-$300 is an "avoid the headache" fee. Well worth it.

This isn't a Google thing... it's the industry. Take the measures to protect yourself or unfortunately you have to be ok with the potential consequences.

Gore1695 • 4mo ago

Folding phones are a novelty that aren't very practical no matter who makes them. It's an expensive lesson

blueastronaut22 • 4mo ago

I've experienced your 1, 2, 6 and 7 on my 2nd P9PF at about the 7 month mark. My original one I had to get replaced at the one month mark. Both replacements were covered under warranty. But I am also paying for insurance since these foldables are such novel devices. If you want to read about my experience, see my response to the last link below. I have not opened up my 3rd device to use yet, but they sent a refurbished unit, and in what could be mistaken as 'new' packaging.

Check out these other posts that may be related to your issue.

<https://www.reddit.com/r/PixelFold/s/O8apo6ZdvH>

<https://www.reddit.com/r/PixelFold/s/PZnrPbOnK7>

<https://www.reddit.com/r/PixelFold/s/cwDMngsXFV>

Good luck, and so sorry you are going through such a headache with Google.

Lonestar_2000 • 4mo ago

Skip to main content+ Createcockypock_aioli • 4mo ago

Google has such shit customer service. I just had my pixel 8 screen get the well-known vehicle green line problem which has happened to many people and is known to be a hardware defect. Google instituted an extended 3 year warranty to cover this (again, known) problem. Well after a week of going back and forth with multiple Google agents that initially say I'm covered only to then say "it's only a limited number of IMEI's and you're not covered" I'm ultimately shit outta luck. Google inexplicably won't cover it. I kept trying to push them on why because my phone was mint condition, no damage or falls or water damage or anything, and I clearly fell under the extended warranty program but they just kept saying "we only intended that to apply to a limited number of IMEI's." It's such bullshit. Between the terrible customer service and the multiple hardware issues I've dealt with across multiple generations of pixel phones, I think next phone I'm going back to Samsung. Or maybe OnePlus or some other option. Get fucked Google.

mIn34 • 4mo ago

Pixel 8

I just went through the pixel app for mine and went to the closest Google certified repair place for mine. Did you put in your IMEI into the app? It should verify it for you

cockypock_aioli • 4mo ago

Yeah I went through the app followed by dealing with an agent followed with being "elevated" to another higher up agent and they kept giving me excuses about my IMEI and the green line needing to be a specific way. I know others that have gotten the screen replaced without issue (which isn't a good sign that the defect is so prevalent) but for whatever reason they denied me 🙄. Considering I didn't damage or drop my phone and it was in mint condition, a little over a year old and exhibiting the exact symptoms, I left that experience extremely upset. Replacing that screen was extremely expensive for me but less than a penny for Google and they screwed a loyal customer. And at a side note, they would only respond to the emails once a day. So I'm sitting around with no phone waiting for their "elevated importance agent" to respond once every 24 hours with a message saying "we understand how frustrating this can be, please be patient as we handle your claim" only to be told "I'm sorry your IMEI doesn't qualify." I ask why and their answer is we can't really tell you.

TaroTheCerealian • 4mo ago

Did you purchase an extended warranty when you purchased the phone?

Square_Lynx_3786 • 4mo ago

It sounds like it needs a new mother board. Did anything out of the ordinary happen to the phone 3 weeks ago?

Create

No, it just happened out of the blues

HowlinWolf57 • 4mo ago

Welcome to the Wonderful World of Pixel and its equally forked Google customer support.

DiagonalBike • 4mo ago

Google ghosted me when I contacted them about my Pixel 7 becoming unusably after installing last week patch. They would not call me and the chat session was worthless. I decided to abandon the Nexus/Pixel platforms and just move forward with Samsung. Dang shame too.