Google didn't ship my device and are now refusing to refund me - Update

A couple of weeks ago, I made this post here about how Google is refusing to refund me and a lot of people gave their advice. It's 2 weeks later and after a lot of back and forth with Google, they are still refusing to refund me. I am genuinely baffled as to how they've come to this decision. I'm attaching images in this post so people can fathom how unbelievably bizarre it is that despite all the evidence, they're saying they won't refund it. Album here. Email thread with Google support here. I've contacted Klarna and they aren't much help either so far. What options do I have left?

Small claims court? But you have to be 100% certain that your case is iron-clad or it could cost you a lot in legal fees. Seek legal advice before going down this route.

They said legal advice, which is not legal representation. It is just asking a professional lawyer something (in this case and a lot of cases it means asking how likely it is that you will win the case), while legal representation is having someone else present your case.

Don't know why you got downvoted - this is a legitimate and GOOD way to get hold of their customer care team. They WANT to help us, but the bureaucracy makes it difficult.

At least the Reddit request route give a direct line to folks who can ACTUALLY do something.

ricky_clarkson • 7mo ago

Do those still happen/work? I had a couple of emails with Ziggy back in the day (am Googler, but not responsible for your refunds!) but then it went quiet.

No idea. I've never used it but it's still in the sidebar so I assumed it was still operating.

A quick search brings up this post from 9 months ago, where the OP says ziggy never replied to the request.

Would be nice for the mods to confirm it still works.

What did Klarna say when you spoke to them, like me and many others on your last thread suggested?

I'd call them if there's a number available at this point. See what the process is from here. Because as the credit provider they can't keep collecting payments from you for goods that you haven't got!

when i key in the DHL tracking number from your album it claims the item was delivered on 6/11 @ 10:13am. https://www.dhl.com/us-en/home/tracking.html?tracking_id=jvgI06007181001213248851&submit=1&inputsource=marketingstage

That sounds like why they wont refund you...

RealBabarAzam OP • 7mo ago

If you click on all shipment updates, you'll see that it starts in the Netherlands and ends up in the Netherlands having never even left the Netherlands. I live in Germany and my address is the same. The status is all green now but it used to be red and said that it was returned to the sender. DHL's customer support also says it was returned to the sender

unseenmover • 7mo ago

Huh. Do you have the phones IMEI number? I thinks its only our order receipt.

Beginning_Engineer_2 • 7mo ago

This might be good info to communicate to Google. And perhaps you can get DHL to clean up their tracking record. And if you paid with a credit card, handle it via those guys.

Quantum_Tarantino_ • 7mo ago

I dont think so b/c then it would show the shipping origin from the album as the destination on the link i provided and destinations from the link i provided and the album are the same..

_Quantum_Tarantino_ • 7mo ago

I think that's because it was returned to Netherlands by German post, then DHL from Netherlands to the Google Depot.

Still a good clue as to why a refund is being denied

qalpi • 7mo ago

That never even left the Netherlands (OP is in Germany)

Sarcasm?

Mysterious-Hat-5662 • 7mo ago

Yes, sis you read the email?

"What support team do you talk about, Mann hahahaha? Are they blind?"

Like I said, maybe they deserve it. But saying that to them isn't going to help.

RealBabarAzam OP • 7mo ago

Yeah, you're right to be fair. But I was just so bemused by their replies that I could do nothing but laugh. Especially because they take ages to reply

chargeback

Time_Sheepherder1450 • 7mo ago

Well, the tracking info currently says that the phone was returned to ggole. You should get a refund for this!

shauggy • 7mo ago

"should" is the key word there. I had a similar situation with Google, and it took almost 2 months and an email to Sundar before they finally refunded me.

daern2 • 7mo ago

Honestly, this might be the best route - go corporate.

Skip to main contentCreateEfficient_Loss_9928 • 7mo ago

Is the return fully returned back to Google? If not I'd just wait, as any chargeback or court will probably simply ask you to wait.

Drtysouth205 • 7mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

A chargeback will result in OPs Google Account being locked and it will be a nightmare to get it back IF they even give it back.

Does it day that using the actual DHL website, just to be sure. Not using googles links that show DHL tracking.

contact DHL. I checked the tracking # and it seems stuck at DHL

TxDrumsticks • 7mo ago

Honestly, you might try to take your case to somewhere like The Verge. This seems like one of the kinds of things that they would bite on. They'll get a good article out of it, and you might get money back without having to deal with legal.

Go back to Klarna. You've bought goods on credit that are not fit for purpose or not received. You have recourse under the Consumer Credit Act. If they wont address the issue, take them to the FOS.

cantstopthesevisions • 7mo ago

Get in touch with DHL, get them to remove the mention of "successfully delivered" from your tracking.

Google support is horrible, I've went through 4 Pixel 6 phones:

I've ordered a Pixel 6 at launch back in 2021. They shipped me one with a completely non-functional display. After a back and forth with support they agreed to send me a replacement.

The replacement came in a used box -- not even original. It had fingerprints and dust on it. WHY DID THEY SEND ME A USED ONE IF I BOUGHT THE ORIGINAL ONE NEW. But that's not all, the replacement had the exact same screen issue. So after complaining, they sent me a new one.

The third phone now, was also refurbished, even though I explicitly asked them to send me a new one since I paid for a new phone. And guess what, the phone had a thick layer of dust under the camera lens.

Essentially I threatened to sue them for scamming me and asked to connect me with a manager. I told them that this was an actual SCAM and that I've already contacted a lawyer (I was bluffing lol).

In the end, they got scared and sent me a new Pixel 6 all the way from New York via ground shipping (I live in California).

TL;DR: Google have horrible support, tell them you're in touch with a lawyer and unless they fix your case, you won't let it go.
