Google phones are not getting better

I own the 7 pro and the 9a recently upgraded to the 10 pro and honestly I feel like the 7 pro is better. It looks better, has a better looking display, battery life is about the same, the camera is the same. The only thing the 10 pro has going for it is the A.I features that aren't that great imo and oh gee thanks a free year of gemini plus.

Ain't no way. Unless the 10 pro is god awful.

The 9 pro was a much much better phone than the 7 pro.

JxK_1 • 4mo ago

I have the 10 pro and it's no better than my 7 was when I first got it. It's better than the 7 was after 3 years. But not out of the box

withoutapaddle • 4mo ago

Can you elaborate on what makes the 9pro much much better than the 7pro?

I have a 7pro and have been watching fairly closely the last couple years, but nothing about the newer phones seems more than a marginal improvement. The days of leaps and bounds on camera quality are apparently gone.

Skip to main content+ CreateRamsfanman7 • 4mo ago

For me the biggest thing was having a pro phone that was smaller in size.

Favorite improvements:

- The screen is much brighter in the sun. -The speaker is more clear if that's important to you. - Fingerprint scanner is a HUGE quality of life improvement. -Navigation is a lot smoother and snappier. -Significant battery life improvement and thermal improvements. My 7 used to nearly burn my hand. -Wifi and 5g seem to be a bit better connectivity. -Selfie camera, and video are better, though I feel macro used to be better. -Also I think the 9 is just more comfortable and better design. My 7 screen shattered in my pocket once and I still don't know what happened. But I fixed the screen and it's still my backup phone.

8 to 9 pro felt like a bigger jump than 7 to 8 for me. But I still think the 7 was a great phone. It was my first pixel!

Makes sense. Most of the stuff you listed are either not issues I have or not activities I use my phone for much (video, selfies, etc).

I guess I don't want a smaller phone. I actually wouldn't mind a slightly larger one. When I realized the new XL versions were the same size as the previous normal versions, I was disappointed.

Something's off if the 7 Pro has the same battery life as the 10 Pro... How long have you had it?

The display on the 10 is objectively better. Better colours, density and top brightness.

Claiming battery life is better on the 7 Pro is pure insanity. Kudos to OP if they were able to squeeze good battery life out of their 7 Pro but I upgraded mine to the 9 Pro last year mainly for battery life.

I could watch my 7 Pro battery drain scrolling socials on a light rail ride. Literally 20-30% gone one way. My 9 Pro was a noticeable improvement finally lasting all day long no issues.

Gemione • 4mo ago

The 7 pro has a bigger battery than the 10 pro. If the battery is in good shape then it will last longer. Tensor5 chip in the 10pro requires up to 20% more power than than tensor g2 in the 7pro.

I had a p7p from launch. So I've had it 2.5-3 years and battery went kaputt about 3 months ago It was always warm. Use it while charging and it reached 40C and slow charged or kept constant battery only even.

The original stuff that was said when I first got it is that it's learning your habits and will bed itself down after a few weeks.

I got a refurb when the battery finally went kaputt 3 months ago and the new one is way way better. 0 heating issues from the outset. Fast charges while in use etc.

My stats for SOT are 8hrs on a full charge from accubattery.

The difference between both of my p7ps I've had from a battery perspective is night and day.

I've been using them since 3a. After that I've had 6, 7 pro, 9 pro, and now 10 pro. They are getting better every iteration.

Away_Media • 4mo ago

Same for me. 3, 4xl, 7pro, 8 pro, 9xl and 10xl. This post is complete nonsense. But hey... ignorance is bliss.

AlienJew420 • 4mo ago

I'm on a 10 pro from a regular 7 and it is a great upgrade but the AI features feel like a big step back to me. hey google and maps are both so prone to error, like my smart light prompts aren't as reliable and the GPS is always trying to have me take the craziest back roads (and I'm sure it's not the direction settings for maps).

JadeDream1 • 4mo ago

The speakers are better the photo post processing is faster, the viewfinder has better quality the 10pro has better portraits and 50mp portraits

The screen is better

Looks are subjective, I think jade and moonstone are the best colors they've done.

The modems are better compared to the 7

It sounds like you're just unaware of what's improving which is reasonable since Google spends the event talking about AI

Then mentions improvements to random YouTubers or their podcast

Skip to main contentCreate

The most noticeable thing with the 10 pro for me is the video quality difference, like the native 4k HDR 30fps video is phenomenal compared to the 7 pro, and don't get me started on the completely free option to upscale the resolution to 8k AND have 60fps HDR video. Sure, it isn't done locally and isn't true 8k, but 4k is already enough for me and 4K 60 FPS WITH HDR IS B.E.A.U.T.I.F.U.L!!! I was genuinely blown away by the video quality, especially when disabling the camera option which forces the videos to be permanently zoomed in by at least 1.5x, it's good for stabilization but I prefer to have that stabilization removed in order to get the full quality of the sensor

I also have a Pixel 7 Pro and honestly don't feel the need to change it for a long time. The screen is as big as the "new XL" models, the camera is excellent, and it's fast at doing everything. Why spend over a thousand euros? For AI? Pffft

Cameras and screen are objectively better on the 10. No clue what you're talking about.

The year of Gemini is also a year of free 2TB Google One storage. You don't have to use the AI features.

It may not be a worthwhile upgrade for you, but to say it's WORSE is disingenuous.

ZahidInNorCal • 4mo ago

Is that really a benefit if it's only for a year? It basically means either I don't use the storage, or I use it but find another place to put everything after a year, or continually renew my subscription to use my data.

I upgraded last year from 6 pro to 9 pro because it is a smaller factor and a little bit better camera specs. You will no longer see that kind of revolution on new releases as technology for phones is a bit stale for the last few years. This will apply to all brand makers that's why you will see they will try bond you to their services - storage, AI to make sure you will spend money there.

The 7 Pro has horrible battery life and horrible thermals. The phone gets hot like no other. Also, the screen is way too dim on this phone. It's one of the biggest pet peeves. The 10 Pro is faster in every regard and the screen is miles better. That alone is worth the upgrade. Oh and one more thing, the selfie pic camera on the 7 Pro is atrocious. walterjnr • 4mo ago

I went from a 4XL to a 9 Pro and the 4XL definitely had a more sensitive screen. Sometimes it takes a few taps for the 9 to register especially near the top of the screen.

Soulshot96 • 4mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

Looks are subjective. The display is technically better in almost every way. If battery life is the same...you may still need to give it a full week for battery optimization to kick in, because both the 9 and 10 are notably ahead of the 7 Pro in the battery life department. Camera differences are likely pretty subtle though.

To be clear, these phones haven't improved nearly as much as I'd like, but your post is still absolutely mad.

Pixel 3 XL Pixel 7 Pro

Although I'm currently still on my 7 Pro, I do think the Pixel 10 series are obviously better than this.

Competitive_Star4026 • 4mo ago

I have a 9 pro XL and I also have the 7 pro. There is no comparison, although the seven was a great phone, after a number of updates to get it working as intended, the nine is better overall but not in any revolutionary sense. IMHO, The 9 pro XL has a better feel, improved features and performance on almost every metric in particular the cameras.

The biggest issue I have seen with pixel phones is out of the box when they are released they are not what I expected, in a bad way. Google today reminds me of Asus in the computer world. Pretty good hardware but the software that runs it needs to play catch up all the time. Unfortunately with every pixel phone I've owned, and I've owned more than just the seven or nine series, it's always been that way.

Jonnodude • 4mo ago

I disagree.

I had the Pixel 7 Pro and it was barely lasting a day, with minimal screen on time, after owning it from new when it came out over 2 years ago.

My P10PXL gets taken off charge at 5am, has about 6 hours screen on time, and goes on charge about 9pm and has 60% battery left.

Once I got used to that this phone has been great. Having, that the extra screen real estate for movies, games or just productivity has made it worth it for me. My line of work really takes advantage of running full apps side by side. The camera is plenty good but coming from a p9pro there are situations where I miss the larger sensors.

I originally had the official Google case but returned it because it just didn't have the grip I desired. Swapped it out for a lattercase and I've been much happier and the bonus is its paper thin.

Pixel 10 Pro XL

To each their own but I came from a 7 Pro to a 10 Pro XL. The 7 Pro was running Android 16 and all and I find the 10 Pro XL to be a huge upgrade in nearly every regard I can think of. Screen, battery, materials, haptics, sound, and performance.

I see each year that stopping at seven pros is a good choice because it doesn't seem like there's any diminishing returns. I feel like twenty twenty-seven will be the year.

If I didn't have the 7p, I would've waited for the 11 and or just skipped the 10xl. But I legit couldn't stand the battery life and thermals anymore.

Pixel 8 Pro

I think there's diminishing returns with all the different smart phones these days, not specific to the Pixel. The top phones from all the manufacturers all have good screens, cameras, and general performance and I think the last few years have been fairly iterative with just things like AI, camera tweaks, zoom, or things that are software specific.

Personally i think anyone going from a Pixel 6/7 should see significant improvements in screen, fingerprint sensor, and thermals from my experience going 6 Pro, 8 Pro, and now 10 Pro XL

I do find it somewhat ironic for all the complaints about Tensor performance, Tensor G5 is a pretty decent boost over G2 and we have someone not really noticing it.

Captain_slowish • 4mo ago

I can't disagree with your statement.

That said for my use cases. Pixel phones continue to blow away anything else android. Are they perfect, no. Do they cut corners, yes. Do I wish they made different decisions, yes.

But at the end of the day. Having tried uncountable android phones. The pixel series works best for me. Despite its many, many compromises.

I feel the same way about the new google phones... why upgrade to a pixel 10 pro when it is basically the same as a pixel 7 pro , it is so disappointing that photos aren't that sharp anymore as a pixel 3 xl, it is sad that the shutter speed isn't that fast or capable of capturing something without blurring expressions, eyes, etc... it lacks detail. How can we explain that a pixel 3 xl was way more capable at capturing those details and in providing sharper shots... also after all this time, it is shameful for such bad video quality with a lot of stuttering, also it is a shame that a tensor chip costs only to google 60$ to produce which is so far behind the snapdragons performance, yet they ask for pixel 10 pro xl the same price as a samsung s25 ultra or iphone 17 pro max... google pixel is really disappointing, long gone the good old direction and focus in the camera quality... i refuse to upgrade my pixel 7 pro if google prefers to waste their money in celebrity promotion only for marketing instead of delivering a good product that those celebrities would really want to use in real life... instead of faking in a paid promotion

It was about the battery life of Pixel 10 compared to its predecessor. Because I'm looking to buy one of them and most of the reviewers said Pixel 9s performed better in battery life despite their batteries being smaller in capacity than the 10s.

I was asking in the post if this was because of the new GPU PowerVR DXT-48 being not efficient as the Mali GPUs.

I had the 6, 7 and now 9 pro. I never had big issues with the cellular network, but I remember sometimes the 6 had problems with staying even on 4G and used to go back to 3G a lot, airplane mode fixed it most of the time. I noticed an improvement on the 7 regarding that and the 5G was super fast (never was able to test it on the 6 because where I lived there was no 5G).

On the 9 Pro everything looks great to me. Never had an issue with coverage or speed.
