I am done with Google Pixels....RANT

You said:

edit : i have pixel 7

So, I have been a Pixel user for the last two years. I got it in December 2023 and it was working fine. It was going great, apart from the atrocious battery life. But a couple of months ago, like in November, the battery swelled and I went to the service center as the display was coming out and I realized that something was wrong with the battery. So they offered me a free battery replacement and now, after two months, in January, two more issues have arisen. One is the Power button has gone into the body, like it isn't pressing well, it isn't clicking and while after applying a case, it is almost not possible to press the power button. And another thing is the USB port, the charging port, it isn't holding my cable tightly and isn't recognizing the cable that I used for all of its time with me. And also by its own cable, the Google's own cable, it is charging on one side only, not from the other way around. So I went to the service center for that and for the power button, they told me that for a single power button, the entire body needs to be changed. And secondly, for the charging port, they cleaned the device and even after cleaning the device, nothing changed. It wasn't working. Then they asked me to submit the device. And upon submitting, they were telling me to pay upfront of 1400 rupees, like 850 rupees for the diagnosis and the other 500 rupees for the service charge. And they said that if a hardware issue is found, then the motherboard needs to be changed because the charging port isn't treated separately or as a separate entity, but it is connected with the motherboard. So the entire motherboard needs to be changed. And that would cost me around 70 to 80% of the original price of the device, which is 50K in India, where I live. And if we consider even the 70% part, that would cost me around 35K, and I got the device for 40K. So I clearly said no and came back with the device at home, and I am immensely disappointed in this. Because Google is a premium brand, and I love Pixels, but this kind of issue, and it's not just me, I today read many forums on Reddit that discussed the same issue that many users are facing. So I don't know what Google is doing with the devices, but these kinds of hardware issues are not acceptable. And now, even though I'm a big fan of Pixels, the next time when I'm buying a phone, I would have to consider, and I may not even go with the Pixel anymore because if this is the kind of experience that I get for paying a premium price for a premium device, I don't want it.

Pixel 7 Pro

Are you me? Because this is EXACTLY the same issue I'm facing

Since the people in this sub also don't bother, don't expect any suggestions here

Since 2017, I've been a Pixel user myself but it's time for me to jump ships. Would suggest you to do the same

Yeah bro, honestly whenever I do switch, it's highly unlikely to be a pixel Btw what pixel device are you using and what issues you facing and did you go to the service center and if yes, what did they say to you

Pixel 7 Pro

I have a P7P

I'm facing 3 issues currently:

- Battery is depleted. Needs replacement
- Issues in the Type C USB port. No cable is getting fit in. Unable to charge and simply relying on my slow wireless charger
- The volume button came off by itself

So, when they find out about these issues, they say that they won't change by battery because my "VOLUME BUTTON IS BROKEN". They will first replace the WHOLE back panel because of one volume button and then change the battery. The back panel is already half the rate of Pixel 10..smh

And the because the USB port is soldered to the motherboard, they will need to change the motherboard for the new USB...which is approx the same price as the new Pixel

Now as a customer, I'm so frustrated because I had Pixel 2XL before and I had no issues with its services that time

I've decided to move on from Pixel and Google now because of their greedy attitude

Bro, this is honestly not acceptable from a reputed brand like Google.

In my case, I was lucky enough that these issues weren't there when I went in for the battery replacement, so they replaced it for free.

But it's not like we're the only ones facing this, there are many other users on this sub who've complained about the hardware quality....so it's clearly the incompetence of Google providing bad hardware and a terrible service

And honestly, in your case it's even more messed up. They should replace the battery no matter what condition your device is in. Leaving a faulty battery as it is is sooo dangerous, it's like holding a bomb in your hand.

And seriously, if I were in your place, I also wouldn't want to stick with this brand, but since my battery got replaced, I will hold on to this device for some more time, but when I decide to switch, I may go for a samsung s series or a vivo x series at this point.....what device is in your mind for a switch?

Sadly this isn't a consumer help subreddit. This is a protect Google subreddit. You'll just be downvoted and mocked when you bring problems to this subreddit. You can check the 'new' feed of this subreddit and see that every post about a problem is downvoted and rarely if ever does anyone offer help.

Your issues are very common with Pixels. There is a reason that Pixel is the least reliable phone brand, it's by design.
