PSA/Reminder: If You're On Fi, Don't Use the Fi Store for Black Friday

I'm planning to upgrade from P9Pro to P10ProXL, mostly because I miss the bigger form factor of my P6Pro (plus magnets are neat!), and was waiting for the BF sales. Was about to purchase through the Fi store, but was annoyed about the trade-in value they were giving for my old phone ($190). Checked Google Store for fun, and get the same Fi discount (just bumped up to -$600), and the trade in value is LITERALLY DOUBLE ($380). I get it, separate orgs, but yikes.

Also, at first I was having trouble applying the Fi discount in the vanilla Google store, but found the old post here about turning on CPNI sharing, which totally did the trick! Big thanks to u/yawara25 for that one!

What if travel agencies competed to get your flight booking? They do on Navifare. We find a better price 2 times out of 3

And you can stack a 10% off Google Store referral code. I paid $533 w/tax for 10 Pro 256GB

Didn't they remove the ability to stack the 10% and BF savings after the first day or is it enabled again?

I just tried and couldn't stack 10% and black Friday. However. Buying through fi.google revealed a $600 discount before trade in.

I dunno. I ordered on Sunday (in the Google store)

Possibly, but I just ordered a 10XL when my phone sent me a code "saveproxl" which was $150 that stacked on the BF $300 off.

Placed-ByThe-Gideons • 3mo ago

Since that is targeted, it does stack it's just the referrals that don't seem to be stacking.

I've seen that. I figured I'd share that code in case it works for anyone else.

When I turned on cnpi sharing in my fi settings, my phone trade-in value in the google store goes from $550 to $410. But I do see the $600 discount for the Fi phone option. Fi gives me $310 trade-in value. What's weird is that Fi assesses tax on the full MSRP while the google store assesses tax on only the discounted price.

If I get a 256gb 10 pro xl through the google store and use my 9 pro xl as trade-in, the price after trade-in is $248

If I get a 256gb 10 pro xl through the fi store and use my 9 pro xl as trade-in, the price after trade-in is $407

With the additional year of 2TB gemini one plan (I'd be paying for the 2TB annual plan without gemini anyway), it is basically a net $0 to upgrade from the 9 pro xl (for me).

Plus the added bonus of not being beholden to Fi's promotion terms, keeping the device as the active device for 120 days, or not being able to change plans if you desire.

If you get the $600 discount for purchasing a FI phone from the google store you are still beholden to FIs promo terms. It is the same promo from the FI store.

Ah--I guess that makes sense! Thank you for pointing that out.

The 2 TB in Google One and Gemini offer is only available if you buy through Google fi.

Pixel 10 Pro XL

I bought my 10 pro xl back when it first released, I also got a better deal (both discount price and trade-in) on Google store than on fi store. Totaled about $100 difference

Is the $500 offer that I saw earlier today on Google Fi for the Pixel 10 Pro no longer offered? I'm not seeing it.

MLVD_EPU • 3mo ago

I got the BF deal for the Pixel Pro 10 XL (1TB). PAID $1084 out the door from Google fi. No Trades.

I found it to be a decent deal. Need the upgrade from my A73.

NoCartographer1991 • 3mo ago

Yes purchasing through Fi right now is not recommended!

jclin • 3mo ago

I made the mistake in thinking that the BF deals would be mediocre and my Pixel 7 at the time couldn't hold a decent charge, so I just bought a new Pixel 10Pro a couple of weeks ago on Google Fi. I figured I could just get a price match if the BF deals were good. I'm an existing Fi customer Turns out, the BF deal is 50 dollars less. So I sent a message to Fi and they said please go to the Google Store for a price match I.

Did that, and they said that they have to transfer this request to Google Fi

So, not sure what to do. Google Store's price matching is very straightforward, so go to Fi at your own peril. I'm paying 50 dollars to get my phone 2 weeks earlier. Not the end of the world, and not enough to do a return and rebuy. Still annoying.

Ah shoot I just ordered from Fi a few days ago :(does anyone know if I'd be able to return that device before activating and go through the Google store route? I don't see any reason why not, as long as the offer applies after activation and not after I make the initial purchase. I'd hate to lose out on both offers

I went to get a 9a as an existing Fi user today, Fi Store price was $249, Google Store $399. GS didn't recognize me a Fi user even after making sure CPNI settings were on. Any suggestions? I spent nearly two hours chatting with Fi and Google today to no avail.
