Pixel 11 will keep the same design

Google has flat-out confirmed that we are not going to get major design changes each and every year from now on. We're all well aware that the Pixel 10 was the first to rehash the previous design, which'll continue until the Pixel 11, according to comments from Google's Chief Design Officer for hardware products, Ivy Ross. Designs are finalized from now until 2027. For better or worse, we will see the same design for a while to come.

That's completely fine. The design isn't the issue. It's the hardware inside.

SteveBored • 5mo ago

Yeah I like the design. Pixels are good looking phones.

Alphawolfdog • 5mo ago

Default

Current one is good, personally I think they peaked with the 6 though. The fully blacked out visor was such a clean look I can't believe they changed it after just one generation

Edit: although saying that my friends p9p camera glass keeps breaking so I dunno.

DoTheRightThingG • 5mo ago

Mine didn't shatter. But then I had it for a year. Maybe it happened to people who kept it for several years?

Jedski89 • 5mo ago

I'm gonna be honest. I'm still rocking a p6p and none of my glass has ever shattered. I'm just memeing

Maro1947 • 5mo ago

Same. Still workout perfectly fine

Nedisi • 5mo ago

Got mine on preorder, still "in use". Last two years it's without a cover, and it's been years since I had a screen protector. It's perfectly fine, and I'm not careful at all, it falls all the time.

Cueball666uk • 5mo ago

I always have a case and screen/camera glass covers. Also have a dedicated "pixel pocket" with nothing but my phone in...

Can't believe there are savages out there in the wild just running around with naked phones in pockets with keys and other stuff.

Madness 🤪

I always "baby" my devices, and when they are retired they go back in the box in pretty much the same condition they left the box.

Nedisi • 5mo ago

I make a point to not get devices I need to baby 🤪 To be fair, I started going commando when the phone was pretty old. It was the swan song of looking at my pretty phone, and a desperate attempt to keep it a bit cooler. It honestly doesn't look bad at all, especially considering how slippery it is. My new Samsung is safe in a case 🤪

Pixel 6

I've had my Pixel 6 since about a month after launch and, including dropping it directly onto my bathroom tiles less than a week after getting it (without a case), mine has never shattered.

The only work it needed was about two weeks ago when the battery started swelling. Got it replaced in 90 minutes for $120. It's been fine for me for a long time.

I agree with the 6 series looking the best. It had that unique android look to it that you don't really get no more especially in the US.

everyone seems to feel that way but I have a p10 XL and the thing I miss the most coming from p8 pro is the Daft Punk look. I think the camera bar looks better when it stretches across the phone.

Yeah I liked the camera visor that went the full length better than the pop out look of the 9 and 10, though I do like any version of it better than the just raw camera lenses poking out like Samsung goes with

I agree. Pixel has it's own look now and I think it looks great. I'm keeping optimistic that after some feedback on the Pixel 10, and how Apple have done what they have with the iPhone 17 for a cheaper price, they will get everything right with the Pixel 11. I'm hoping it's going to be their best yet 🍌

Pixel 8 Pro, Pixel Tablet

From the leak road map from a couple years ago, it showed that the pixel 11 is going to get on device video boost, which I think is going to be the most exciting aspect of the pixel 11 launch. Oddly enough, though it seems that the G5 is going to be on par with a G6 in their leak report because they're going to be trying to save costs so I'm hoping it trickles down to the pixel 10 as well.

That makes sense because people are treating a (feasibly) number 4 rated video camera as the worst video camera of all time. It's either "iPhone quality" or "shit".

To me, this is good news. The Pixel 6 introduced a unique design making pixel an easily recognizable lineup. The changes to the camera bar on the 7 and 8 felt unnecessary. Glad to see some consistency starting from the 9 lineup.

Today's phones provide less significant changes and market regulations start to enforce longevity, especially through software support. Focusing on showing off the series instead of the model year strengthens the pixel in competition to Samsung's S Series and the iPhone.

redesigned camera bar was very impactful, even though it hadn't a drastic new direction, and continuing with the same iterative changes to refine the design just makes sense.

If they're saying they aren't going to make any changes, even modest iterative changes, I can guarantee you review-tubers and media outlets are going to call the next device "boring".

I like the current design, so it doesn't bug me, but I also liked the design of the 6, and liked the subtle change made to the 7, and really liked the subtle change made to the 8. I think Google struck a pretty happy medium where 3 generations debuted with mild, iterative design changes that kept the new devices feeling fresh without needing to dump a ton of resources into redesigning the device from the ground up, and the subsequent generation introduced a more drastic design language update. Would be a shame (but par for the course) for Google to give up on a proven strategy.

Mounamsammatham • 5mo ago

The 7 & 8 made the camera bar feel more premium. I absolutely love those designs.

Daeveren • 5mo ago

Pixel 10 Pro

The normal recording in outdoor/daylight is exceptional. Low light recording with Video Boost is also exceptional. Video Boost itself outputs exceptional video (it's been voted best smartphone video for 2nd year in a row). Its issue is with shaking from walking - and with a subpar experience in other areas (slow motion is 1080p, no 4k 120, cinematic blur is 1080, can't record 4K 60 HDR).

+ 1 more replyericdabbs • 5mo ago

The Pixel 10 physical design is not broken. However the internals need massive improvement with Google needing to move to a Mediatek 5G modem and switch back to the ARM GPU Mali for the Tensor G6.

misterrpg • 5mo ago

Have they ever used a Mediatek modem?

ericdabbs • 5mo ago

Nope since they were tied to the hip with Samsung for the first 4 Tensor generations since they helped produce the Tensor chips so they stuck with Samsung modems. However Samsung 4G/5G modems have had issues so the initial plan was for Google to go with Mediatek for the Tensor G5 but I guess time ran out or both sides weren't ready. I expect the Tensor G6 to use a Mediatek modem.

I haven't experienced a performance issue with the modem. My phone typically gets a better signal than my wife's iPhone 16 pro... We're on T-Mobile...

PNWoutdoors • 5mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

Right? The modem was updated in the 9 series and it made a great improvement. Zero complaints here, and now we have satellite connection like the iPhone.

I don't know what more I would need at this point unless there is some massive leap forward in technology.

Pixel 10 Pro XL

Yeah no issues whatsoever with the 9 or 10 so far. Been getting fine signal. Sometimes I'll even do a speed test and will get over a gigabit on T-Mobiles network. Idk where people are living with so many issues.

PNWoutdoors • 5mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

I've seen up to 1.4gb on my 8 Pro in the middle of a downtown area.

I don't go into downtown areas much so I haven't really seen what the new modem can do but when I have a 'weak' signal on the newer generations I can tell just through normal use things load better and way less heat generated.

I don't necessarily hate companies keeping the same design year over year but it would be cool if they actually gave better color options than what we typically get. Something to get people excited, black, silver, and white just don't get people excited to buy the same phone year after year.

oneninesixthree • 5mo ago

People overwhelmingly buy black phones unfortunately. I loved that the pixel 6 had really cool color options, loved the two tone coral and had the green one

zakary1291 • 5mo ago

I just wish they'd have introduced one with a striking coloured power button like the pixel panda. It's such a small yet bold design choice which makes the device feel more playful. I wonder if that means no camera hardware change because that's the big issue.

[deleted] • 5mo ago

Is this because they'll have to change the design anyway in 2027 when the EU law about having user replaceable batteries kicks in?

Isbonice • 5mo ago

The truth is that I don't have any problem with the design, it doesn't seem to me that it will be outdated or that I will have any complaints regarding the following years. What Google could choose is to add one more button that performs some function that they could add to the software, but as they say, its biggest defect is the hardware and they have to improve that processor in the GPU.

dextroz • 5mo ago

Why are these old farts (live Ivy Ross) that I guarantee have never used tech beyond tactical tasks in their life designing anything for cutting edge devices. So frustrating. The round corners are breaking so many apps, Google own UI elements are not clickable on certain screens, etc.

BESTtaylorINTHEWORLD • 5mo ago

If the environmental protection are serious about eWaste, they should be targeting phone companies for the ever changing sizes of their products so the 4 cases I have for my previous phone would fit perfectly on my new phone but they don't, so when I go to recycle my phone the cases are pointless

Design is fine. Just bring back the features real pixel users want.

Front facing speakers reminiscent of the P2 XL. Face unlock reminiscent of the P4 XL make soli useful. The cameras are fine. Improve video quality and stabilization. I think it's time for a red pixel.

Asleep_Employ9729 • 3mo ago

I have upgraded ever year since the pixel 3, this year I haven't. The cameras are identical, battery is pretty much the same, and that's the only reason I'd want to upgrade. Hopefully next year there'll be a bigger upgrade. The 10 feels like a 9s 🤔😞
