

Skip to main contentr/GooglePixel ×

Search in r/GooglePixel

Create

r/GooglePixel • 10mo ago

abc21086999 Pixel 9 📱

So it's my turn, my Pixel 6 suddenly died

So this morning my Pixel 6 decided to crash when I tried to open an app, and got stuck in a boot loop.

After a couple of restarts I could successfully boot into the system, but it dies again when I tried to unlock the phone by fingerprint.

At last I decided to factory reset by using Android Flash Tool, but after completed the whole process it stuck at Google logo but with white background, which is the first boot up logo.

<https://i.imgur.com/6bgEbMc.jpeg>

I have seen lots of people complaining about their Pixels suddenly die but never thought about this would happen on me.

Edit:

I later flashed again and successfully setup the phone, but again it dies during normal usage.

So I got a chance to use `adb logcat` to catch the exact moment when my phone dies:

```
----- beginning of crash 04-03 19:42:07.876 9286 9289 F libc : Fatal signal 7 (SIGBUS), code 3
(BUS_OBJERR), fault addr 0x0 in tid 9289 (Jit thread pool), pid 9286 (eddit.frontpage)
```

Actually got another one, but there's no any kinds of fatal message.

Later on I asked Gemini Pro, and it says all this phenomena point to the hardware issue.

Final edit:

It completely dies today (2025/04/04), can't even turn it on.

R.I.P my 3.5 years old Pixel 6.

Archived post. New comments cannot be posted and votes cannot be cast.

146

117

Share

Sort by: Best ▾

Search Comments

Trumpet_Jack • 10mo ago

Skip to main content

Create

to reboot and backup once before it froze and died again. I never got past the bootloader again.

CornOnTheCaulk • 10mo ago

They added a security update on purpose to their servers knowing that Google pixel 6 or 6 pro would not be able to get this update to screw over the old phones so you would be forced to upgrade. They're all trying to do this bullshit 🤔

jimmyayo • 10mo ago

I have a 6pro, I'm praying to Thor that it stays okay until the P10 release 🙏

spideytres • 10mo ago

Same here 🙏

CornOnTheCaulk • 10mo ago

The P10 release? It's absolute garbage. It's literally the same as the 9 series so why wouldn't you just buy that?? Lmao you're honestly better off with an 8 pro from Amazon renewed for the low-low. I also always recommend getting a used one which is even less money on Amazon. I ended up getting a OnePlus 10 pro 5G and I got the acceptable version instead of fair good or like-new. Sometimes it is a hit or a Miss, for example, mine only had a scratch on the back casing of the phone that you could barely see and that was about it. Every so often or really every blue moon, somebody might get one with a tiny little scratch on the screen that people want to bitch and whine about but it doesn't affect the actual phone itself.

Positive_Scientist_9 • 10mo ago

Me too

ToxicTaxiTaker • 10mo agoxjrsc • 10mo ago

Pixel 6

Lost my Pixel 6 to similar issues. I got a really good deal on a Pixel 9 but if it happens again then I'm out. It's ridiculous that a phone that I've kept in perfect condition can just work one day then be completely bricked the next.

u/presetio • Promoted

Skip to main contentCreate

Loud-Possibility4395 • 10mo ago

privatest0ck • 10mo ago

I had a pixel 5a. Loved it. Had it for 2 years max. One day I went to open Google Chrome as I do everyday, and it just blacked out. Completely bricked. No life. No power. Just straight up bricked out of nowhere.

phillyb82 • 10mo ago

Same thing happened to my Pixel 4XL. Funny thing is that even though it was 4 years old Google offered to send me a refurbished replacement. Six months in the new phone did exactly the same thing. I like these phones but the quality doesn't seem great.

Banglophile • 10mo ago

Pixel 9a

Same. Did you get the replacement? They sent me a 6a whose battery life is bad and getting worse

privatest0ck • 10mo ago

I did open a case with Google support and was told that I'm out of warranty AKA shit out of luck. I took it to a local uBreak I fix place and they said the motherboard was dead. I was fairly peeved about the situation but I really enjoyed the 5A so I went and got the 6A. I hate to say it but I do not like the 6A anywhere near as close as I liked the 5A.

1 more reply

fooaddict95 • 10mo ago

In 2021 I bought my mom a Pixel 6. In 2023 it died suddenly and wouldn't turn on at all. Bought her a 7a to replace it.

Several months later she tried to turn on the dead p6 and it booted up and worked just fine. Wtf?

believeinbong • 10mo ago

I'm actively trying to warn users on the pixel subs about the poor pixel QC. I get downvoted to hell but then it inevitably happens. Only way to avoid QC issues is to upgrade every year so the problems don't manifest

Skip to main content+ CreateGhostttpro • 10mo ago • Edited 10mo ago

That's how a lot of Pixel haters are made. They read a hype post, make the purchase, get burned and then speak out against it alot.

In a way the company loses more money long term. Expectations should be realistic.

Market share peaked around 14% and dropped back down to 3-4% so quickly in the US. I know it's cliché to say iPhone users are dumb but they are seriously underestimating consumers.

tomashen • 10mo ago

Market share drops because pricing is stupid. Way overpriced highnorthhitter • 10mo ago

I agree, I had a 4a get a blue vertical line about 18 months in. Then a brand new 8 pro the screen just stopped working due to motherboard issues. In fairness my 7 is still going strong as a backup phone and my 2 was solid, but still that's 2/4 with quality issues.

I also think it's important for people to know about Google support. There's so many horror stories of trying to get repairs or replacements if it's still under warranty. Including mine for my 8 pro.

BangWashingMachines • 10mo ago • Edited 10mo ago

Finally, someone who speaks out the truth. The entire subreddit hivemind will lynch anyone who speaks out against pixel QC (or anything in fact)

My pixel 6a lasted exactly a year and died right outside of the warranty period - black screened and doesn't power on anymore. My older 4a is also a paperweight that doesn't turn on anymore. Both pixels showed issues within 1 year of usage and both died shortly after the 1 year mark.

I picked up an s23 base model and it's been going strong for the past 2 years. Sure, there's bloatware and Samsung crap but snapdragon > tensor, and I would rather have a working phone with bloat then a bloatless one that dies yearly.

All the advantages pixel provides over other manufacturers are effectively nullified by their phones dying from terrible QC.

I loved my pixel and the godlike camera but I need a proper phone that is reliable, with solid manufacturer QC and a well established customer support system. I have previously used Samsung, 2 Huawei's, Sony, Poco, HTC and the only phone to have ever have issue is BOTH my pixels.

djamp42 • 10mo ago

I've had a pixel 6 pro since launch, still fine.

Skip to main contentCreate

Did you even bother to read OP's post. His pixel 6 was fine, until it wasn't. Hopefully we won't need to read a post like this by you anything soon 🙄

djump42 • 10mo ago

Every phone that has ever existed was fine until it wasn't lol

believeinbong • 10mo ago

I don't use iphone but my brother is still using an iphone 7 and my mom just switched from an iphone 11 that was still running fine. Eventually, all electronics will fail but good QC means it can last longer.

jimmyayo • 10mo ago

I promise you if you go to the iPhone sub you're going to find just as many QC problem posts. And didn't Apple get famously sued for planned obsolescence?

1 more reply

1 more reply

LowOwl4312 • 10mo ago

I will actively upvote anyone who shits on Pixels.

- posted from my Pixel 8 with pink line in the screen and battery that doesn't last a day

Foldingtrees • 10mo ago

"upgrade every year"

Listen to this guy

Zealousideal_Way_287 • 10mo ago

Whats QC?

believeinbong • 10mo ago

Quality control

Skip to main content

Create

seemsSomewhatLegit • 10mo ago

My Pixel 3A is still going strong, Android 12. Battery is still strong too. Been my daily driver for over 4.5 years

2 more replies

SwollenPig • 10mo agohoratiobanz • 10mo ago

Top 1% Commenter

This is how Google supports phones with 7 years of software updates, by bricking any phone older than 3-4 years. Nobody can complain about end of software support if they can't turn their phones on.

Zubame • 10mo ago

I really think the March update is causing all of this. My P8P has been working great since I bought it but the March update made it crash so many times that I was forced to use recovery to reset the thing. Now I use my old phone while my Pixel is off waiting for the April update that hopefully fixes everything.

abc21086999 OP • 10mo ago

Pixel 9

Same here! Some apps just stuck randomly before my pixel died

More_Awareness_1054 • 10mo ago

Pixel 7 Pro

Then flash the Version before the Update

SCUM_LEE • 10mo ago

Bro my wifis been broken completely since the March update and all Google can say is hardware issue. I'm holding on and getting by with reverse tethering until ??? update that fixes it or I can mail it in but don't want to go without a phone for any length of time honestly.

horatiobanz • 10mo ago

Top 1% Commenter

Pixel 8 Pro? Bluetooth not working as well?

SCUM_LEE • 10mo ago

Yes I've literally had my phone on for 190 hours since I started having the issue cause only my Bluetooth is working and I'm scared if I reboot it will stop working again

Skip to main content

Create

domthemom_2 • 10mo agou/peeksje • Promoted

Everwaves SMP [Vanilla] {1.21.11} {Fresh World} {Whitelist}

Learn Moreeverwaves.net

Thumbnail image:

Everwaves SMP
[Vanilla] {1.21.11}
{Fresh World}
{Whitelist}ShadowVlican • 10mo ago

My Pixel 6 Pro still works, but the sim card slot is dead

Mazda3Squirrel 🍰 • 10mo ago

Mine suddenly died on me, as well. I bought it when it first came out and had it, totally trouble free, for about four years. Even the battery was still strong. I had no plans on changing phones anytime soon, as that one did everything I needed.

The screen glitched out on mine and wouldn't register touches in the right place or at all, sometimes. This made it nearly impossible to get into the phone to accept requests and upgrade (as I found out at an emergency run to the Verizon store).

After exhausting multiple account recovery options, we were finally able to get the new pixel 9 configured. All I can say about it is that I'm pretty underwhelmed. This thing is a little smaller than my old phone and has free noticeable upgrades, other than the face unlock.

I'm not super impressed with Gemini, which was also starting to become more integrated in my old phone, btw. The camera might be a little better, but the photo processing seems a little excessive at times. All in all, I can't tell much difference between this and my 6.

Oh well, hopefully this one will last as long. It's still better than my partner having to replace his iPhone every 2-3 years. Not to mention the countless air pods and watch upgrades.

[\[deleted\]](#) • 10mo ago

My pixel 6 just stopped working recently. What seems like a software problem. Touch targets on the screen only work sometimes. Trying to interact with the swipe gestures, or any of the android UI (like turning on the bottom navigation features) won't work, and that part of the screen no longer registers touch. Completely useless. Tried all sorts of things. Plugging in a controller was the only way I could even navigate to settings.

Skip to main contentCreateFoxtrotshinobi • 10mo ago

Well my 6a touch screen stopped working this January and then I thought it would be a good idea to restart the phone because that's what usually a person will do but I didn't know that will brick the device I am not even getting till bootloader

assassindead • 10mo ago

This is so funny because my pixel 6 pro suddenly died while I was in a app. Can't even get to bootloader absolutely 0 signs of life. I even took the screen off and unplugged the battery internally for a bit and tried again completely gone. So I got a pixel 9 pro XL for $750 on back market lmfao

Icy_Connection8412 • 10mo ago

My 3a is still going strong, I have owned it since 2019!

Danneyland • 10mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

A few years ago my Pixel 3XL died suddenly one morning. Charging did nothing. The authorized repair store couldn't tell me what was wrong with it other than it was "likely an issue with the motherboard". I replaced it with a Pixel 6 (still kicking but the battery is worn out), and now a 9 Pro XL. My condolences for your 6 🍀

+ 1 more replygrumpy-915 • 10mo ago

I had a 3a that I gave to a friend and it is still working. I replaced it with a 6a that died with battery bloat shortly after the warranty expired, I replaced it with a 8a. I am keeping my fingers crossed.

Xisrr1 • 10mo ago

Sounds like a faulty battery to be honest.

Anthonyg5005 • 10mo ago

Pixel 6a

Probably, battery issues cause the weirdest side effects on phones. Had a one plus that would make weird sounds and have a glitched screen before it'd just turn off every time you tried to boot it. Changed the battery and it started working fine again

Skip to main contentCreate

Yeah, I dislike that my 6a runs so hot and drains fast, but if a phone randomly shuts down and fails to boot — that's definitely a sign of a faulty battery.

Older Pixels like the 6 series overheat, which damages the battery in the long term.

Anthonyg5005 • 10mo ago

Pixel 6a

Yeah, I'm using my mom's old phone, the battery was expanding and it caused the display to pop out of the frame so I repaired it and kept it as she got a new phone

abc21086999 OP • 10mo ago

Pixel 9

I actually swapped my battery last year by authorized retailer, so...

GundamOZ • 10mo ago

They're really trying to come up with reasons why you're at fault for Google's bad hardware and Software.lol😂🤔 I can't wait for the day Google rebrands its smartphone line-up leaving Pixel Fanboys hanging.

uchuucowboy • 10mo ago

Pixel 6a

Always the case. Any time somebody calls out the horrendous quality control an army of people will accuse them of using it wrong and telling them it's their fault somehow.

Xisrr1 • 10mo ago

Interesting.

believeinbong • 10mo ago

It's really not that difficult to grasp. Pixels have bad QC

drknight09 • 10mo ago

Did u buy it new? (2021)

Ir0nhide81 • 10mo ago

Pixel 9 Pro XL

Away_Media • 10mo ago

Skip to main contentCreate definitely a sign that the end is near. I'm using a Pixel 7 Pro, for about 1.5 years now.

Major-Split478 • 10mo ago

Is the boot loop a common issue.

About a year or so ago, after updating I think it was the android 14 my phone got stuck in a boot loop. It stopped after half an hour. The boot loop then happened again, half a year later in a period over a week, where it would boot loop for a couple of minutes and then repeat maybe the next day, or when I put it in the charger.

For the past 8 months nothing like that has happened again.

Bobatea • 10mo ago

Mine also just died this week. It was working completely fine, then it was dead as a brick out of nowhere. The battery wasn't even low at the time. No response whatsoever from any type of charging. Authorized repair shop confirmed it was toast.

Ok-Estate-8792 • 10mo ago

Fred_Dibnah • 10mo ago

Oh mine did this and I fixed it by taking it out of the case and running the power button "side of the phone" over my mouse mat firmly. Back and forth etc. Got rid of the bootloop issue. Worth a try?

YourPalDonJose • 10mo ago

What inspired you to try that? I believe you I'm just surprised, would not have thought to try that myself

1 more reply

robbiekhan • 10mo ago

Former Pixel 9 Pro XL 1TB...

Damn another one bites the dust :S

bookedsam • 10mo ago

Pixel 3

My pixel 3 dies sometimes but it can usually be repaired by dropping it.

Skip to main contentCreateFit-Western673 • 10mo agoYoungzaphood • 10mo ago

My pixel 7 has been a tank, fwiw

YourPalDonJose • 10mo ago

My pixel 6 (regular) is still going strong, years and years later.

The usb port is starting to finally get loose.

I'm hoping I can make it to the 10 release. But who knows at this rate

Realistic-Table-778 • 10mo ago

Does this issue just randomly happen.? How do you recover your data in this case .? Precautionary tips. Also are pixels set to randomly die like this so you get forced to buy new phone .?

1 more replyDry-Tank5413 • 10mo ago

My 6 pro purchased from backmarket, still going strong after a few years. Probably will purchase another used from backmarket. I refuse to pay full price and insurance on a new device.

Rude-Sheepherder8345 • 10mo ago

I Can't Make Phone Calls

.

,I

...

ryno250f • 10mo ago

My 6a was having charging issues and then last Tuesday it completely died. Would not boot up or anything. Then today my wife's 6a just did the same thing...she had no charging issues on her phone.

Create

Vambak • 9mo ago

It could be the March 2025 update. I faced similar issues with P6pro. Took it to Google's official support center and mentioned my phone is crashing after March update. They replaced motherboard & battery all for a minimal charge.

itsmicah64 • 8mo ago

It's so weird. Mine didn't turn on for the longest time and then all of a sudden it turns on with 80% battery.....strange

sumochopssss • 6mo ago

Mine just died on me :(

bastard

IngenuityLoose7001 • 5mo ago

o meu pixel 6a morreu do nada, estava no bolso e simplesmente não liga mais. a "sorte" é que eu tenho um pixel 3xl, se não tinha ficado na mão. complicado a google não resolver isso sendo que parece um problema de software.