UPDATE: Switched from an iPhone to Google Pixel Pro: First Thoughts

Original Post:<https://www.reddit.com/r/GooglePixel/s/UtC9tvk77f>

I've had some more time to use the phone, play around with it, and have some updates.

The Good / Nice to Haves

- Emojis: not sure if this was always an android thing but I like that I can "fuse" emojis. My go to has been the turtle and any smiley emoji. A nice little touch.
- Snappiness: after someone suggested changing the animation speed to 0.5x, it's made the experience better. Phone feels snappy.
- Performance: no issues with running games or videos or shows. Haven't noticed any lag or overheating as a result of using the phone heavily
- Battery Life: so far, so good. Can use the phone the entire day on a full charge without much worry.
- Casting: compared to the iPhone, casting my screen to the TV and connecting to other devices are much easier. With the iPhone, sometimes I'd struggle to get it to connect but I haven't had that issue yet.

The Not So Good

- Audio Latency: almost returned the phone because of this. Surprised not many others are having an issue. But using the Pixel Bud Pros 2, there's latency on non-Youtube apps (Netflix, Hulu, games, etc) of about 400ms. With the Airpod Pros 2, there's about a 200-250ms latency. I spoke with customer service about this and we walked through probably 10+ workarounds but nothing worked. They offered a replacement device but I declined. I had another Pixel Pro around that I didn't return yet and tried to test it on there too. Same issues with latency so doubt a new phone would fix it. I have another case open and they can't seem to figure it out.
- Qi Charging: for the first week or so, the Qi charging worked. Now it doesn't and I read an article online where others seem to have the same issue.
- Black Screen: sometimes when watching Instagram stories, if I press something, the screen goes black. I essentially have to exit viewing the story and go back to it to correct it.
- Pixel Bud: not the best in my opinion. Sound isn't as crisp and using the controls are a bit awkward and difficult to get used to. However when on a phone call, friends and family have said they can hear me better via the Pixel Buds vs Airpod Pros.

The Grey Zone

- Camera: can't really say the camera is good or bad nor can I say it's better or worse than Samsung or iPhones. Quality wise, it's the same. However my girlfriend has pointed out that the color from the Pixel are more natural whereas her Samsung seems to saturate it a bit more. In darker environments, the pictures do come out better than the Samsung.

Tips That Have Helped

- Opening the Power Off, Restart, etc: by default, you have to press the volume up and power buttons, which can be awkward. In Settings, go to System > Gestures > Press & Hold Power Button > Power Menu

Skip to main contentCreate

I Hate to Admit

- For some of my app issues such as Baseball 9 being laggy and the controls being off, I was stubborn to uninstall and reinstall the game because I didn't want customer support to be right. But...they were right lol. After reinstalling it, the game works fine.

I didn't return the phone because Google requires you to have the original box and like the idiot I am, I threw it out lol. And I didn't want to deal with the hassle of paying for a new phone either. So I'm making things work as best as I can. So far I've gotten used to the phone and hoping in due time, firmware updates fix some of the issues.

yeah, I've got the box for my Pixel 2. Yes, my wife is not happy as I am bordering on hoarding...

rdyoung • 5mo ago

I recently cleared out a stack of phone boxes going back years. By default I keep the box and usually leave any accessories like cable and wall wart in the box just in case I end up needing something I know I have it in reserve. And yes, I have a couple of collections of wall warts and cables for regular use.

Pixel 6 Pro

When we moved in 2020 I was clearing out one of the closets and found boxes for my wife's Palm Treo 755p from 2007, my Samsung Instinct from 2008, and a Palm Pre from 2011 plus wireless charging dock (underrated device that got screwed by Palm and Sprint). You just never know when you're going to want to fire up those old devices with their proprietary charging cables.

tom2320x • 5mo ago

Have you ever seen trash cans in front of Apple stores? Some people are so eager to start using the phone that they unbox the phone right there and throw the box out

[deleted] • 5mo ago

I keep the box for years, that helps with the resale value on marketplace.

I can see the journal app, pixel studio being dropped. They seem so pointless. If people are going to journal, they'll want to do it across devices no just one. Pixel studio makes no sense with gemini doing the same stuff except for the sticker thing.

I upgraded from iPhone 12 mini to the 10 Pro XL. Spent 10 years with iPhone due to blue bubble pressure here in the US. This is the best phone I've used since my beloved LG G2! I absolutely love it and have not noticed any performance issues.

Only thing that doesn't match my experience is the latency.

I have absolutely no issue with latency over Bluetooth with my pixel buds pro 2, any of my other Bluetooth audio gear (wh1000mx3 headset, JBL flip 4, some random cheap bone conduction headset) but have maybe 200-300ms latency in my car. But I don't really give a shit about that and it is exactly how it was on my previous pixel or any Samsung device.

Seems odd you would be having it as well across multiple devices.

I believe this is standard bluetooth latency, the only thing that can be done is an update somewhere to either software or firmware or both that makes the other apps use Bluetooth low latency instead of standard bluetooth or higher bitrate BT. I agree that all apps that are playing video should be using low latency by default so things aren't out of sync.

You might want to try going into developer options and turning off bluetooth HD mode, which means use a higher bitrate version and see if that auto enables low latency mode. Might make the sound bad though so it's a tradeoff. Edit: Just tried it myself and turning off HD bluetooth made latency in Netflix go down to around 50ms, hardly noticeable delay. Sound is more like an MP3 quality though now

I was going to pipe in on this as well. BT audio is notorious for a high latency. Fine for listening to music or something, but a pain when you're mixing audio and visual in games, videos, etc.

I've also noticed that Apple hardware has a damn high latency compared to other BT devices.

The only real fix is for apps to be aware of it and implement some sort of audio delay.

VLC, for instance, actually has an option for adjusting the audio delay and even a toggle to apply that delay always, or just to BT audio devices, which helps when I'm watching uh... educational videos.

4 more repliesBeneficial-Employ361 OP • 5mo ago

Hmm got it. I'll try finagling with the developer options. I've tried a bunch with the Google customer rep but 50ms latency is hardly noticeable so I may opt for that and sacrifice quality lol

What is the fuse emoji feature? How do you do it?

JMPesce • 5mo ago

Emoji kitchen, with Gboard. You can pick two emojis and it will combine them into a larger sticker, and it will also give you the ability to look at other combinations you can have with a particular emoji.

Beneficial-Employ361 OP • 5mo ago

In the emoji section of the keyboard, you can select one emoji, in my case, the turtle. At the top, it should show some suggested emojis based on that. And when you send it, it'll show which emoji was combined with the turtle. Can't do it on reddit but try it out!

It's a fact that the drivers on the GPU are outdated, so once those are updated to the latest, I'm sure it will solve some issues.

<https://blog.imaginationtech.com/imagination-gpus-now-support-vulkan-1.4-and-android-16>

Vivo3d • 5mo ago

Again with this story. Do you work for Imagination or Google?

JMPesce • 5mo ago

128GB

I'd love it if I did; I just know how to read.

Vivo3d • 5mo ago

Ohhhh, you do? Then you won't mind to point out where in that press release, it says that a) it is valid for the PowerVR DXT-48-1536 and b) Google will implement that driver.

Because if you check the specs for the PowerVR DXT-48-1536 on Imagination website, it states:

API Support

- Vulkan 1.3 with Ray Tracing (Ray Query and Ray Pipeline)
- OpenGL ES 3.x/2.0/1.1 + Extensions
- OpenCL 3.0
- Android NN HAL

<https://www.imaginationtech.com/product/img-dxt-48-1536/>

Oh right, 1.4 is just too new so they just forgot to add it. Let's check a different GPU then. For example DXTP-48-1536 GPU:

API Support

- Vulkan 1.4 (support coming in 2025)
- OpenGL 4.6 via Zink
- OpenGL ES 3.x/2.0/1.1 + Extensions
- OpenCL 3.0 FP

<https://www.imaginationtech.com/product/dxtp-48-1536-gpu/>

So, just because you can read, doesn't mean you know what you are talking about.

Skip to main content

What "story"? This is demonstrably true. Whether the driver would change anything is a different question.

Vivo3d • 5mo ago

Then show me a link from Google or Imagination confirming that the PowerVR DXT-48-1536 is compatible with Vulkan 1.4.

What phone did you come from?

I came from iPhone 15 Pro Max and my girlfriend says all she hears from me are complaints 🤔

Years ago when I was on Samsung S10+ moving to iPhone 13 Pro Max. It was like a revelation. I was so happy. The performance, battery and speeds. Optimised alls. No complaints lol.

I'm loving the File Manager and Photo Album organisation on the Pixel, much better than the iPhone which is making me want to stay. I love being organised. The iPhone was a mess.

The camera is definitely better in outdoor natural light. The video I don't think it's as good. And in door low light or slightly dark room is the same.

Portrait pics on the iPhone and cinematic mode is 100% better. My girlfriend and mates think I'm going to go back to iPhone in the near future...

I really don't want to. I feel I am more productive because the interface of the phone is more boring than the iPhone. Much more geeky. The iPhone is immersive, entertainment, colourful, doom scrolling phone. All the apps are optimised and feels good to be in, which I am trying to reduce!!

Pixel has had a rocky start full of the bugs you've mentioned.

Pixel 10 Pro

The audio latency thing is not the phone's fault. It's the earbuds. Pixel Buds Pro 2 do have a really bad audio latency.

I have so many Bluetooth earbuds and headphones at home right now (Pixel Buds 2, Pro, Pro 2, Sennheiser MTW4, Sport, MW4, Sonos Ace, Sony WF-SP900, etc). And the Pixel Buds Pro 2 is the worst when it comes to audio latency. I definitely can't use them for editing videos on my phone, and playing games with them isn't the best experience. But apps like YouTube, Netflix, Google Photos, etc. seem to have audio sync feature so the audio is never lagging behind video on those apps.

ryanpm40 • 5mo ago • Edited 5mo ago

Hmm, so I don't have Pixel buds, but I've never noticed audio latency with my Sony WH-1000XM3, Sony WH-1000XM6, or Galaxy Buds3 Pro with my Pixel 9 Pro, or my previous Pixel 7. But I know I've heard some hit or miss things about the new chip in the Pixel 10 so I don't know if that plays a factor into things, or if the Pixel Buds themselves are just junk.

Substantial_Boiler • 5mo ago

It's unfortunately a known problem with the Pixel Buds. They weren't even worth MSRP in the first place, and the latency problems just pile into the bad value.
